Two of the most promising substitutes, Downer and Green, have also been under the weather with severe colds or the flu.

South Coventry will have electric lights the ensuing year, as the result of a successful canvass of the citizens of the town by J. M. Wood, who has succeeded in securing a sufficient amount of money to insure the cost of installation and maintenance of 24 incandescent electric lights in the town. The amount subscribed will pay for the lights for the next year, and it is well pleased with the idea of having lights that a scheme will be devised for the continuation of them after the initial contract expires. The lights will be installed by Willimantic parties, and the current furnished by the city.
